

What is a specialised information service?

Specialised Information Services (FID) are funding programmes of the German Research Foundation (DFG). Their aim is to provide researchers with fast and direct access to specialised literature and research-relevant information. Each FID provides offers and services for its respective subject area.

What is the FID Middle East specialised in?

Islamic Studies
Islamic Theology
Oriental Christianity
Arabic Studies
Semitic Studies
Iranian Studies
Kurdology
Turkology
Armenian Studies
Caucasian Studies

The FID Middle East, North Africa and Islamic Studies acquires research material from the MENA region and neighbouring countries in the fields of religion, history, politics, language and literature, among others.

In addition to the subjects listed here, you will also find the FID's regional focus and collection focuses on our website.

MENAdoc & MENAsearch

MENAdoc is the specialised repository of the FID Middle East. Here you will find over 13,000 digital sources and publications relating to the MENA region and Islam in open access.

MENAdoc

MENAsearch

MENAsearch is the discovery system of the FID Middle East - your gateway to research.

In MENAsearch you can search not only the collections of the FID, but also the Middle East-relevant collections of other libraries.

Here you will also find digital texts from licensed databases and open access publications.
